Nan of Music Mountain FRANK H. SPEARMAN

THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY O

(Copyright by Charles Scribner's Some

DE SPAIN LEARNS HOW MUCH NAN REALLY LOVES HIM AND DISCOVERS THAT HIS PLANS FOR PACIFYING OLD DUKE MORGAN WON'T WORK OUT AT ALL

Henry de Spain, general manager of the stagecoach line running from Thief River to St. epy Cat, a railroad division town in the Rocky mountains, is fighting a band of cattle thieves and gunmen gring in Morgan gap, a fertile valley 20 miles from Sleepy Cat and near Calabasas, where the coach horses are changed. De Spain has killed two of the gang and has been seriously wounded. Pretty Nan Morgan, nices of the gang leader, and De Spain are in love secretly-but her uncele finds it out and raves and rants.

CHAPTER XVIII-Continued. -12-

This hulking bully! I know him better than you do." She pointed a quivering finger at her cousin. "He insulted me as vilely as he could only a few months ago on Music mountain. And if this very same Henry de Spain hadn't happened to be there to protect me, you would have found me dead next morning by my own hand. Do you understand?" she cried, panting and furious. "That's what he is!"

Her uncle tried to break in. "Stop!" she exclaimed pointing at Gale. "He never told you that, did he?" "No, nor you neither," snapped Duke

hoursely

"I didn't tell you," retorted Nan, "bestirred up all the time. And Henry with his enemy. de Spain faced this big coward and Gale, beside himself with rage, stood safely could of abuse on Nan's own head. She had appeased her wrath and made no attempt to retort, only looking at him with white face and burning eyes as she breathed defiance. Duke interfered. "Get out!" he said to Gale harshly. "I'll talk to her. Go home!"

Not ceasing to mutter oaths, Gale picked up his hat and stamped out of all of the rumors of three days of susthe house, slamming the doors. Duke, exhausted by the quarrel, sat down, eying his niece. "Now what does this menn?" he demanded hoarsely.

She tried to tell him honestly and frankly all that her acquaintance with De Spain did mean-dwelling no more then was necessary on its beginning, but concealing nothing of its development and consequences, nothing of her love for De Spain, nor of his for her. any point she urged softened her uncle's face. His square, hard jaw from beginning to end looked like stone.

"So he's your lover?" he said harshly when she had done.

"He wants to be your friend," returned Nan, determined not to give up, Duke looked at her uncompromising-

"That man can't ever be any friend of mine-understand that! He can't ever marry you. If he ever tries to, so help me God, I'll kill him if I hang for it. I know his game. I know what he wants. He doern't care n pinch of snuff for you. He thinks he can lift me a blow by getting you away from me."

"Nothing could be further from the truth," exclaimed Nan hopelessly. Duke struck the table a smashing

Spain and his friends where they get reason, you must listen to sense. Think said to herself, was a chance. De of what a position you put me in. I Spain, she recalled, spoke of no one love you for all your care of me. I oftener than this man. He seemed love him for his affection for me and wholly disengaged. consideration of me - because he knows how to treat a woman. I know he wouldn't harm a hair on your head, Mr. Scott?" she asked abruptly. for my sake, yet you talk now of what your words mean-that one of ment of her existence. "Did Mr. de you, or both of you, are to be killed Spain get off this train?" she asked, as for a senseless feud. He will not stand Scott, acknowledged his identity, up and let any man shoot him down without resistance. If you lay your Nan noticed the impassive manner of blood on his head, you know it would his speaking and the low, even tones. put a stain between him and me that "I was kind of looking for him mynever could be washed out as long as we lived. If you kill him I could never stay here with you. His blood would cry out every day and night against

FOU. Duke's violent finger shot out at her. "And you're the gal I took from your manimy and promised I'd bring up a afternoon from Music mountain espedecent women. You've got none o' her blood in you-not a drop. You're the brat of that mineing brotne, of mine, that was always riding horseback and showing off in town while I was weed-eng the tobacco beds." Nan clasped her hands, "Don't blame me because I'm your brother's searching the dark eyes, and watching child. Blame me because I'm a wom- the open, kindly smile characteristic an, because I have a heart, because of the man. Scott put his right hand I want to live and see you live, and out at his side. "I've ridden with to see suspleion, distrust, feuds, that boy since he was so high." slarms, and worse. I'm not ungrate- "I know he thinks everything of both our hearts, I know, but they will ful as you plainly say I am. I want you."

here-I want to be out of it. I'd rather | be dead now than to live and die in it. tatively. She whirled. "I won't put it down. And what is this anger all for? Nothing. He offers you his friendship-" She could speak no further. Her uncle, with a curse, left her alone. When she arose in the early morning he had already gone away.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Try-Out.

Sleepy Cat is not so large a place searched well. But Duke Morgan thing though." drove into town next morning and had not a man to talk much when he had rassment. cause I've been trying to live with you anything of moment to put through, revolver! What business of yours is bear putting off, and had been forced hills this afternoon?" it whom I meet, or where I go?" she at length to run down to Medicine demanded, raining her words with Bend to buy horses. Nan, after her know I came through the foothills?" flaming eyes on her belligerent cousin, uncle left home-justly apprehensive house." She stamped her foot, "Leave impending. She could not telegraph- ticed your pony went lame. this house, and never come into it a publicity that she dreaded would stopped to ook at his foot." have followed at once. De Spain had expected to be back in two days. Such Nan. his ground. He poured all that he a letter as she could have sent would not reach him at Medicine Bend.

As it was, a distressing amount of track of De Spain. Sleepy Cat had couldn't have known I was coming in. but one interpretation for his inquiries-and a fight, if one occurred between these men, it was conceded. would be historic in the annals of the town. Its anticipation was food for pense. For the town they were three days of thrilling expectation; for Nan, isolated, without a confidant, not knowing what to do or which way to turn, they were the three bitterest days of anxiety she had ever k

Desperate with suspense at the close of the second day-wild for a scrap of news, yet dreading one-she saddled her pony and rode alone into Sleepy Cat after nightfall to meet the train But no part of what she could say on on which De Spain had told her he would return from the east. She rode straight to the hospital, instead of going to the livery burn, and leaving her horse, got supper and walked by way of unfrequented streets downtown to the station to wait for the train.

When the big train drew slowly, almost noiselessly, in, Nan took her place where no incoming passenger could escape her gaze and walted for De Spain. But when all the arrivals had been accounted for, he had not

She turned, heavy-hearted, to walk back uptown, trying to think of whom she might seek some information concerning De Spain's whereabouts, when her eye fell on a man standing not ten feet away at the door of the baggage room. He was alone and seemed to be watching the changing of the engines, but Nan thought she knew blow with his fist. "I'll show Mr. de him by sight. The rather long, straight, black hair under the broad-brimmed hat marked the man known and hated "Uncle Duke, if you won't listen to in the gap as "the Indian." Here, she

Repressing her nervous timidity, Nan walked over to him. "Aren't you

Scott, turning to her, touched his bloodshed between you two. I know hat as if quite unaware until that mo- night. I will send Henry de Spain and we want to ask you to accept this

"I guess he didn't come tonight." self."

"Is there another train tonight he could come on?"

"I don't think he will be back now before tomorrow night."

Nan, much disappointed, looked up the line and down. "I rode in this cially to see him."

Scott, without commenting smiled with understanding and encouragement, and Nan was so filled with anxiety that she welcomed a chance to to anybody. He always would listen talk to somebody. "I've often heard to me until now. Now, he says, I have him speak of you," she ventured, you to yet out of what you are in "I think a lot of bim."

"You don't know he?" she said ten-

His answer concealed all that was necessary. "Not to peak to, no."

"I am Nan Morga 1." "I know your name pretty well," he explained; nothing seemed to disturb his smile.

"And I came in-tecause I was won ried over something and wanted to see Mr. de Spain."

"He is buying herses north of Medicine Bend. The rainstorm yesterday that one would ordinarily have much likely kept him back some. I don't trouble in finding a man in it if he think you need woory much over any

"I don't mean I em worrying abou to stay for three days waiting for a Mr. de Spain at leedicine Bend," dischance to meet De Spain. Duke was claimed Nan with a trace of embar-

"I know what you mean," smiled here in peace among these thieves and he had left home determined, be- Bob Scott. She regarded him quesand cutthronts, and not keep you fore he came back, to finish for good tioningly. He returned her mae reassuringly as if he was confident of De Spain himself had been putting his ground. "Did your pony come protected me from him with an empty off for weeks every business that would along all right after you left the foot-

Nan opened her eyes. "How did yo "I was over that way today." Son "I will never marry you to save you of his intentions-made frantic efforts thing in the continuous smile enlight from the hangman. Now leave this to get word to De Spain of what was ened her more than the word. "I no-

> "You were behind me," exclaimed "I didn't see you," he countered pru

She seeted to fathom something talk did attend Duke's efforts to get from the expression of his face. "You > she said quickly. "No." He paused. Her eyes seem to invite a further confidence. "But after you started it would be a pity if any harm came to you on the road." "You knew Uncle Duke was in to see me about?" town?" Scott nodded. "Do you know why I can.e?"

De Spaix Laughed at Her Fears.

"I made a guess at it. I don't think minute." you need worry over anything." "Did you follow me down from the hospital - Unight?"

ou to be handy.'

Even De Spain himself, when he out a card. came back the next night, seemed man around, Nan, don't worry. Don't ments." believe we shall ever fight. I may not be able to bring him around tomorrow, or next week, but I'll do it. It takes two to quarrel, you know." "But you don't know how unreasoning Uncle Duke is when he is angry," gone back on him, and he doesn't care what happens. Think, Henry, where it would put me if either of you should kill the other. Henry, I've been thinksee what must come. It will break be broken anyway. There is no way garden, he at her side on the bench that he called their bench. It was here he had made his unrebuked her, that he began to live. "Give you up," he echoed with gentleness. "How time to reply to the insult. could I do that? You're like the morning for me, Nan. Without you there's no day; you're the kiss of the mountain wind and the light of the stars to me. Without the thought of you I'd sicken and faint in the saddle, I'd there would be no tomorrow. No matter where I am, no matter how I feel, if I think of you strength wells into my heart like a spring. I never could give you up."

"Nan, what do you mean?" "You must give me up."

He told her all would be well because it must be well; that she must trust him; that he would bring her safe through every danger and every storm, if she would only stick to him. And Nan, sobbing her fears one by one out on his breast, put her arms around his neck and whispered that for life or death, she would stick.

It was not hard for De Spain next morning to find Duke Morgan. The difficulty was to meet him without the mob of hangers-on whose appetite had been whetted with the prospect of a death, and perhaps more than one, in the meeting of men whose supremacy with the gun had never been successfully disputed. It required all the diplomacy of Lefever to "pull off" & conference between the two which should not from the start be hopeless, because of a crowd of Duke's partisans whose presence would egg him on, in spite of everything, to a combat.

But toward eleven o'clock in the norning. De Spain having been concealed like a circus performer during every minute earlier. Duke Morgan was found, alone, in a barber's hands in the Mountain house. At the moment Duke left the revolving chair and walked to the cigar stand to pay his check, De Spain entered the shop through the rear door opening from the hotel office.

Passing with an easy step the row of barbers lined up in waiting beside their chairs. De Spain walked straight on the open aists, behind Morgan's back. While Duke bent over the case to select a cigar, De Spain, passing, placed himself at the mountain-man's side and between him and the street sunshine. It was taking an advantage, De Spain was well aware, but under circumstances he thought himself entitled to a good light on Duke's eye. De Spain wore an ordinary sack street suit, with no sign of a weapon about him; but none of those who considered the nselves favored spectators of a long-awaited encounter felt any doubt as to his ability to put his hand on one at encomparably short notice. There was, however, no trace of hostility or suspicion in De Spain's greet-

"Hello, Duke Morgan," he said frankly. Morgan looked around. His face hardened when he saw De Spain, and he involuntarily took a short step backward. De Spain, with his left hand lying care essly on the cigar case, faced him, "I heard you wanted to see me," continued De Spain. "I want to see you. How's your back since you went home?"

Morgan eyed him with a mixture of suspicion and animosity. He took what was to him the most significant part of De Spain's greeting first and threw his response into words as short as words could be chopped: "What do you want

"Nothing unpleasant, I hope," returned De Spain. "Let's sit down a

"Say what you got to say."

"Well, don't take my head off, Duke. I was sorry to hear you were hurt. And "I was coming from my house after I've been trying to figure out how to supper. I only kept close enough to make it easier for you to get to and from town while you are getting strong. "Oh, I anderstand. And you are very Jeffries and I both feel there's been a dind. I don't know what to do now." lot of unnecessary hard feeling be-'Go back to the hospital for the tween the Morgans and the company, up there just as soon as he comes to to show some of it's ended." De Spain put his left hand into his si le pocket "Suppose Uncle Duke sees him first, and held out an unsealed envelope to I am deathly afraid of their meeting." Morgan. Duke, taking the envelope, "I'll see that he doesn't see him eyed it distrustfully. "What's this?" he demanded, opening it and drawing

"Something for easier riding. An hardly sole to reassure her. When annual pass for you and one over the she had told all her story, De Spain stage line between Calabasas and laughed at her fears. "I'll bring that Sleepy Cat-with Mr. Jeffries' compli-

> Like a flash, Morgan tore the card pass in two and threw it angrily to the floor. "Tell 'Mr.' Jeffries," he exclaimed violently, "to-" The man that chanced at that moment to be lying in the nearest chair said Nan mournfully. "He won't listen slid quietly but imperiously out from under the razor and started with the barbers for the rear door, wiping the lather from one unshaven side of his face with a neck towel as he took his hasty way. At the back of the shop a fat man, sitting in a chair on ing it all over for three days now. I the high, shoe-shining platform, while a negro boy polished him, rose at Morgan's imprecation and tried to step over the bootblack's head to the floor below. The hoy, trying to get out of the are sold by the natives to brokers.

or pretended to fall, over him-for it They were sitting in the hospital might be seen that the man, despite his size, had lighted like a cat on his feet and was instantly half-way up to the front of the shop, excisiming profaneavowal-here, he had afterward told ly but collectively at the lad's awkwardness, before De Spain had had

> The noise and confusion of the incident were considerable. Morgan was too old a fighter to look behind him at a critical moment. No man could say he had meant to draw when he stamped the card underfoot, but De Spain read lose my way in the hills; without you it in his eye and knew that Lefever's sudden diversion at the rear had made him hesitate; the crisis passed like a flash. "Sorry you feel that way, Duke," returned De Spain, undisturbed. "It is a courtesy we were glad to extend. And I want to speak to you about Nan, too."

Morgan's face was livid. "What about her?"

"She has given me permission to ask your consent to our marriage," said De Spain, "some time in the reasonable future."

It was difficult for Duke to speak at all, he was so infuriated. "You can get my consent in just one way." he managed to say, "that's by getting me." "Then I'm afraid I'll never get it, for I'll never 'get' you, Duke."

A torrent of oaths fell from Morgan's cracked lips. He tried to tell De Spain in his fury that he knew all about his underhand work, he called ECONOMIC RULE IS UNBROKEN him more than one hard name, made no secret of his deadly enmity, and challenged him to end their differences then and there.

De Spain did not move. His left hand again lay on the cigar case. "Duke," he said, when his antagonist had exhausted his vituperation, "I wouldn't fight you, anyway. You're the more of it they would give for a crazy angry at me for no reason on earth. If you'll give me just one good reason for feeling the way you do to- the Philadelphia Ledger, ward me, and the way you've always acted toward me since I came up to this country, I'll fight you.'

"Pull your gun," cried Morgan with an imprecation.

"I won't do it. You call me a coward. Ask these boys here in the shop whether they agree with you on that. You might as well call me an isosceles triangle. You're just crazy sore at me when I want to be friends with you. Instead of pulling my gun, Duke, I'll tear up all those fine-spun and dusty lay it out on the case, here, to show political economy books we were you that all I ask of you is to talk rea- taught in school. son," De Spain, reaching with his left hand under the lapel of his coat, took himself, on the plate-glass top of the cigar stand. It reduced him to the nesmallest chance for his life if Morgan pum and pay a smaller amount of it should draw; but De Spain was a desperate gambler in such matters even at twenty-eight, and he laid his wagers on what he could read in another's eye.

"There's more reasons than one why shouldn't fight you," he said evenly. "Duke, you're old enough to be my father-do you realize that? What's the good of our shooting each other up?" he asked, ignoring Morgan's furious interruptions. "Who's to look after Nan when you go-as you must, before very many years? Have you ever asked yourself that? Do you want to leave her to that pack of wolves in the gap? You know, just as well as I do, the gap is no place for a high-bred, finegrained girl like Nan Morgan. But the gap is your home, and you've done right to keep her under your roof and under your eye. Do you think I'd like to pull a trigger on a man that's been a father to Nan? Damnation, Duke, could you expect me to do it, willingly? Nan is a queen. The best in the world isn't good enough for her-I'm not good enough, I know that. She's dear to you, she is dear to me. If you really want to see me try to use a gun, send me a man that will insult or abuse her. If you want to use your own gun, use it on me if I ever insult or abuse her-is that fair?"

"Damn your fine words," exclaimed Morgan slowly and implacably. "They don't pull any wool over my eyes. I know you, De Spain-I know your breed-

"What's that?"

Morgan checked himself at that took "You can't sneak into my affairs any deeper," he cried. "Keep away from my blood! I know how to take care of my own. I'll do it. So help me God, if you ever take anyone of my kin away from me-it'll be over my dead body!" He ended with a bitter oath and a final taunt: "Is that fair?"

De Spain finds he will have to use different tactics if he can hope ever to make Nan his wife. What he sets out to do to solve this big personal problem is described in the next installment.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Brazil abounds with medicinal herbs which, though they are not cultivated,

Why That Lame Back?

Morning lameness, sharp twinger when bending, or an all-day back-ache; each is cause enough to suspect kidney trouble. Get after the cause. Help the kidneys. We Americans go it too hard. We overdo, overeat and neglect our sleep and exercise and so we are fast becoming a nation of kidney sufferers. 72% more deaths than in 1890 is the 1910 census story. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Thou sands recommend them.

A Kentucky Case

T. B. Redd, Cadiz, Ky, says: "I had to get up often at night
to pass the kidney secrettons and mornings
I was all worn out.
Intense pains darted through my back and hips and I could hardly straighten. I h a d dizzy spells, too, and of t e n staggered.
Doan's Kidney Pills
cured me and best of all, I haven't had any need of a kidney medicine since."

DOAN'S RIDNEY PILLS FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y

Invest $25 cash and a few dollars monthly you can become associated with a company that should return big profits. You will recognize the truth of this statement when it is presented to you. This is not oil, mining or a sented to you. This is not oil, mining scheme. Your banker or lawyer can O. K. business. Address P. O. BOX 875, Fittsburgh.

The More Money, the Higher the Prices, Has Been the Law Since Earliest Days of World.

When the Indians of New England found plenty of seashells out of which to make their money called wampum, blanket, basket, kettle, pair of moccasins or feather bonnet, says Girard in

The political economy of King Phillip's race and time still prevails. Every day this year the rest of the world has dumped a cool $3,000,000 of gold pon the United States. Now we have nearly $1,000,000,000 more gold than we had when the war began.

If we had cheap wheat, shoes, overcoats, vegetables, or coal after hav ing added nearly 50 per cent to our gold hoard, we should be obliged to

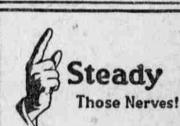

But the books stand, and rightly so, for the very paper they are printed on a Colt's revolver from its breast har- has been boosted upward by this colosness and laid it, the muzzle toward sal wave of gold. When this unmatched crest of yellow metal breaks and recedes after the war-well, we cessity of a spring into Morgan for the shall follow King Phillip and his wamfor what we buy.

An Optimist.

He-Good heavens, the clock just struck one, and 1 promised your mother I'd leave at twelve. She (comfortably) - Good! We've eleven hours yet.

For a practical illustration of economy watch a small boy when he has occasion to use soap.

You miss getting many good things by falling to ask for them.

If it's caffeine—the drug in coffee - that's causing shaky nerves, the remedy is perfectly plain --

Quit coffee, and for a pleasant, healthful table beverage, use -

POSTUM

Postum is a delicious ccreal drink, pure and nourishing and absolutely free from any harmful ingredient.

There's a big army of Postum users who are enjoying better health and comfort since joining the

"There's a Reason"